

Air Force Chief sees decades of more war operations

Military.com

The U.S. Air Force's top officer said he expects the high pace of war-related operations to continue for decades to come. "We've been deploying now for 15 years," Chief of Staff Gen. David Goldfein said. "We've probably got 15, 20 years to go." READ MORE

Here are the biggest defense topics the presidential debates skipped

Military Times

Over the course of three presidential debates, the two major party candidates covered a long list of policy and political topics, including rebuilding the U.S. military, fighting terrorism and handling Russian aggression. But during the 5 hours of nationally televised forums, some of the biggest national security topics were skipped by the candidates and moderators. READ MORE

USO Anniversary gala celebrates 75 years of service

U.S. Department of Defense

More than a thousand people turned out to help the United Service Organizations celebrate its 75th Anniversary at a star-studded gala at the Daughters of the American Revolution Constitution Hall. The organization brings "a bit of home" to American service members doing the nation's business far from America, said J.D. Crouch II, the USO's chief executive officer and president. READ MORE

Revamping the VA

Military Officers Association of America

VA Secretary Bob McDonald - and a broad swath of the veterans' community - is counting on MyVA to culturally transform the department. "We're trying to put the veteran at the center of everything we do," McDonald says. More than 9 million veterans rely on the VA for benefits and services ranging from education and home loans to rehabilitation and health care. READ MORE