

Dear President-Elect Donald Trump

National Military Family Association

Now that Americans have spoken and elected you as the new Commander-in-Chief, military families have a few things they'd like to tell you, our new leader. Military families are tired of the uncertainty, and worried about more unfulfilled promises from leaders who have their loved one's life in their hands. Nearly 300,000 service members are currently deployed, many still fighting a war that's lasted more than 15 years. In that time, benefits for service members dwindled, sequestration became an unavoidable reality, and military families began to wonder if the country really understood the issues their communities face. So how do military families want you to support them during the next four years? READ MORE

Trump's military: Here's what troops can expect from their next commander in chief

Military Officers Association of America

A Washington outsider who pledged to rebuild what he's called a weak and ineffective military soon will serve as the new commander in chief. Donald Trump won Tuesday's presidential election in a surprising political upset after he swept key swing states in the South and Midwest. In his acceptance speech, Trump called on Americans to come together after the divisive campaign season, and pledged to put more Americans to work by rebuilding infrastructure and promised to "finally take care of our great veterans." Presidential Proclamation -- Veterans Day, 2016

The White House

America has long stood as a beacon of hope and opportunity, and few embody that spirit here at home and beyond our borders more than the members of our Armed Forces. Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen are part of an unbroken chain of brave patriots who have served our country with honor and made tremendous sacrifices so that we may live free. On Veterans Day, we salute the women and men who have proudly worn the uniform of the United States of America and the families who have served alongside them, and we affirm our sacred duty as citizens to express our enduring gratitude, both in words and in actions, for their service.
